THE UNCERTAINTIES OF POLITICS.—
One of the means adopted to secure an election by gentlemen running for an office in the gift of the people, is to create the impression upon the minds of other gentlemen of the same political persuasion—some times upon the minds of those of entirely different views—that if these gentlemen, whose mouths invariably water for the fatness of a snug position, will use their influence in their (the candidates) favor during the canvas, and do their best to have them carried triumphantly into office, they will receive a large slice of the good things of this life falling to the share of the candidates, if successful. This generally is stimulus sufficient to make the most inert of individuals fly around with the energy of a steam engine, and is not unfrequently the

THE METEORIC SHOWER.—Although different parties in this city have been staying up for two or three nights past, in the hope of witnessing the predicted display of meteors, they have as yet seen nothing more than a stray star or two shooting athwart the celestial vault. It appears, however, from our exchanges that the shower, or a portion of it, has already made its appearance.

The New York Evening Post, of the 13th inst., gives a lengthy account of meteoric phenomena witnessed from observatories in that city, before daylight, on the morning of the 13th.

The account states that about a quarter before three o'clock, on the morning in question, three bright shooting stars appeared within a period of ten minutes at the south, at an altitude of fortyfive degrees. The stars traveled in different directions—the first eastward; the second westward; and the third directly southward towards the horizon.

Between three and four o'clock two the second westward; and the third directly southward towards the horizon.

Between three and four o'clock two or three meteors, insignificant in appearance, were seen going southward from the position of the Constellation Ursa Major. A few others also appeared at different points in the heavens between these hours.

The time these meteors were in view was from one-fourth to one-half of a second, and their positions were mostly below or between the constellations, the Greater Dog and the Greater Bear.

From four to five o'clock greater numbers of shooting stars appeared. Their line of flight was in all directions but mostly southwest.

The only flight approaching a "shower," which was seen during the night, appeared at four o'clock and ten minutes. Then three stars darted downward in quick succession. One of these was exceedingly brilliant and left a trail which could be seen for a considerable time after its departure. In the course of two minutes there were seven flights. But this rapidity of appearance was not maintained.

Between the hours of five and six o'clock there were no more meteors than are usually seen in a clear night by watching the heavens for that length of time. But about half-past five, a large meteor, as bright and flashing as a rocket, passed from the constellation Orion to the northwest. Its train was as luminous as the brightest flame.

It is evident from the Post's account that there has already been a more dame.

It is evident from the Post's account

It is evident from the Post's account I that there has already been a more than usual display of meteoric phenomens, but whether there will be such a one this year as that of 1833, at this writing, half-past eleven, P. M., we have no means of determining. Cortainly no one in this section of the country has yet seen it.

'Squire Johnson's Office.—This institution suffered yesterday from the general depression caused by the gloomy weather. Two or three creditors were there seeking to recover their own from negligent debtors, but nobody but a creditor would be out on such a day, unless, indeed, it might be a local editor.

THE PROMENADE CONCRET AND FESTIVAL OF THE ST. MATHEW'S MITE SOCIETY.—As we predicted, the concert and festival of the St. Mathew's Mite Society was a splendid success. The programme of the concert, which we publish was not strictly adhered to, but the pieces that were given in addition, were first class and excellently rendered. We have not space to go into particulars and criticise each piece presented, but, as it would be invidious to particularize where all was so good, we may say that the several performers acquitted themselves in a manner fully justifying the high reputation each one possesses for musical talent of a high order.
